

The International Association of Wildland Fire (IAWF) is a professional organization founded to promote a better understanding of wildland fire, built on the belief that understanding this dynamic natural force is vital for natural resource management, firefighter safety, and harmonious interaction between people and their environment.

The association is dedicated to communicating with the entire wildland fire community and providing a global link for people with shared interest in wildland fire and comprehensive fire management.

MEMBER BENEFITS INCLUDE:

MEMBERSHIP

Your membership in the IAWF indicates your support of the wildland firefighting profession and your interest in public and firefighter safety; the use of wildland fire as a land management tool; prevention of unwanted fires; ideas and technology across regions; and increased research into issues associated with wildland fire. Membership is open to all interested persons and organizations.

WILDFIRE MAGAZINE

Wildfire magazine is published bi-monthly by IAWF and includes news from all corners of the world, covering important issues in wildland fire. All IAWF members receive Wildfire magazine.

INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF WILDLAND FIRE

The International Journal of Wildland Fire publishes new and significant papers that advance basic and applied research concerning wildland fire. The journal has an international perspective based on the social, economic and ecological impact of wildland fire around the globe. Individual and student IAWF members receive a discounted subscription rate. All members have free online access to the journal! Eight issues published per year.

CONFERENCES

Members receive reduced registration fees at IAWF hosted conferences. The IAWF hosts The International Wildland Fire Safety Summit; The Fire Behavior and Fuels Conference; and Human Dimensions of Wildland Fire; as well as periodic specialized conferences and summits.

STUDENTS OF FIRE

Members are invited to be a part of this IAWF led initiative, with the goal of creating a community of practice within the global wildland fire community. The mission is to learn about wildfire from personal experience and self reflection, and from the experience of others, and to share those lessons responsibly for the benefit of all.

ACCESS TO CONTACTS

All members have access to the contact information for all IAWF members. Members also have access to our 'Subject Matters Experts' list on the webpage.

WEBINARS

Informative webinars on a variety of wildland fire topics are free to IAWF members.
